The programme was divided into two sessions: the Inaugural and the Lecture sessions. The Inaugural Session began at 12.00 noon with the invitation of distinguished Guests, the Chief Guest, the President, and the Organising Secretary to the dais, and their reception by students of the Philosophy Department with flower bouquets. After that, the guests performed the ritual of lighting the holy lamp. Then, as an opening song, Ambedkar College students sang the Saraswati Vandana (prayer to Goddess Saraswati.) Next, the Principal of Ambedkar College felicitated the guests and offered them traditional tribal 'uttariya' (risha) from Tripura and mementos. Dr. Anupam Mallik, the Organising Secretary of the programme, introduced the guests to the audience and gave his welcome speech. He talked about the significance of the day and welcomed everyone there.

In the Lecture session, Prof. Sukanta Kumar Senapati was the first person to talk about Indian ethics. Prof. Senapati spoke about how Indian Ethics talks about moral behaviour, Niskama karma, Moksa, and other things. He told the students at this college about religion's moral teachings to make them aware of them and to get them to follow some good rules and avoid some bad ones to help build a healthy, peaceful society. He told a story to explain the idea of karma and how it relates to the idea that souls can move from one body to another. In his speech about Indian ethics, Prof. Senapati said that the Supreme goals of human life also seem to be part of Indian ethics.
